Introduction

An internship in China will provide the opportunity to learn and practice Mandarin in all aspects of life. Mandarin is by far the most widely spoken language in the world and possessing the skills to be able to converse it is sure to give you extra brownie points in any job interview situation – particularly amongst multinational organizations conducting business activities in Asia.

It highly encouraged that you immerse yourself in China's rich culture while learning Mandarin. Discover China's history, legacy and place in the modern world all while interacting with locals and building on your language skills.

CIP (China Internship Placements) designed three programs with the help of our language experts. The aim is to help you learn as fast and effectively as possible so that by the time you leave, you have real improvement in your proficiency and also the ability to carry out a simple conversation in Chinese, as well as having a sound understanding of the Chinese culture.

Why study Chinese in China

1. International companies prefer to hire people who speak more than one language. China has become a big market, and leaders are looking for people who can speak Chinese and operate successfully in a Chinese cultural context.
2. Learning Chinese may give you a plus when competing for an important job position.
3. In the future, China will play a major role in world affairs as it has opened up to the West, there are opportunities for employment in all areas.
4. China is a wonderful country in which you can teach English while developing your language and cultural skills. The experience is great, and it's something you will never forget.
5. China is one of the world's oldest and richest continuous cultures, over 5000 years old.
6. China is the most populous nation in the world, with 1.28 billion people.
7. One fifth of the planet speaks Chinese. Mandarin Chinese is the mother tongue of over 873 million people, making it the most widely spoken first language in the world.
8. In addition to the People's Republic of China and Taiwan, Mandarin Chinese is also spoken in the important and influential Chinese communities of Indonesia, Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, Brunei, the Philippines, and Mongolia.
9. China is the second largest economy in the world.
10. China is one of largest trading partners of the United States.
11. Many US companies do business in China and have long-term investments there.

Types of language programs

1. One-on-one Chinese Language Study Program

2. Group Chinese Language Study Programs

3. University Mandarin Program

One-on-one Chinese Language Study Program

Language study should not be rudimentary and strict, but varied and with a plethora of teaching methods to make the study come alive for participants. This is how Language learning is evolving, and what helps guaranty quality. CIP one-on-one Study Program is designed and customized with the participant's requirements and needs duly considered.

Its main advantage is the flexibility aspect which allows participants to study the Chinese Language as they desire. It is usually preferred by busy Business Executives, Interns, and Individuals who have very erratic schedules, and provides that classes could be rescheduled if needed.

It is taught by tutors from reputable Chinese Universities experienced with more than 5 years of teaching Chinese language as a second International Language. They are Chinese natives properly trained in the field. Proper assessment is made for starting participants off at a level corresponding with their current fluency in Chinese. Teaching materials are provided by China Internship Placements at no extra cost. On the first day of class, the expectations of the participant are exploited by the Tutors and class scheduled to fit these requirements.

The expectation of our participants is the prime standard, as well as other established professional processes of language study. After all, value for the money to our Participants is what we strive for!

Classes could be arranged at the convenience of participants either in their private accommodation, in our professional classrooms, or through the use of other venues as agreed between the tutor and the participant. Our role is to make sure that whatever venue is selected, quality is not compromised.

- One on One Private Chinese Language learning arrangements.
- Classes are available for all manner of participants from Basic beginners to advanced and proficient participants. Remember we know that not all participants are created equally.
- Professionally customized Chinese Study curriculum structure.

Gap Year

Excited about college but not quite ready to start? Have you completed High School and looking to get extra global perspective before going to college or you are already enrolled in College but want a Year off? This is an ideal program for you and China is the best destination each year, students across Europe and America are choosing to postpone their traditional academic plans and participate in a gap year experience.

Gap Year Options

There are no rules when it comes to taking a gap year, so the possibilities are truly endless.

Luckily, there are organizations like CIP that specialize in helping students organize this adventures. We assist with everything from finding a host family, to set up the projects, to taking care of meals and travel insurance, airport pickups and your safety all you need is to pack and come to China.

Areas of focus students may choose from for their gap year activities include:.

- Education and teaching;
- Environmental Management;
- Internships and Career Development;
- Chinese Language and Cultural Immersion;
- Traveling and Searching the History of China;
- Volunteering and giving back to society;
- Interacting with other Chinese Young People with equal ambitions.

Why take a Gap Year in China?

- According to David Hawkins, director of public policy and research at the National Association for College Admission Counseling, taking a gap year ...could actually help students succeed in College. since participants may be more focused, mature, and motivated for their undergraduate experience;
- Many students also find that their gap year allows them to help others which is a fulfilling experience;
- Travel with other students and explore China like a local;
- Enlightening cultural exchange between the student and inhabitants to develop cultural empathy This is essential to understanding the world;
- Developing Language Skills that enhance employability and profile;
- Expanding circle of influence and social contacts. Taking a Gap year in China allows participants to meet people and develop business networks for the future;
- Living with a homestay provides deeper cultural immersion and also develops a family relationship within a country that is becoming the future of the world.

High School Programs

Learning extends beyond the halls of your high school and the boundaries of your city or hometown. One potentially great way to expand your horizons before you earn your diploma and decide where to attend college is to study abroad in high school. Many students who choose to participate in high school study abroad programs do so during their junior year so as to not miss out on the many events that occur during the senior year.

There are a variety of different programs ranging from summer Chinese Language Camp opportunities to spending the entire academic year or semester in China. This potential opportunity provides students with the chance to make lifelong friends, memories, and experiences to support them throughout the rest of their lives. It is also an opportunity to grow and reason with a global perspective

Why Study Abroad in High School in China

Our High school abroad programs provide life experience;

Enhanced perspective of global occurrences and anchors participants to understand China from a historical and future perspective;

Language skills, and the opportunity for personal development;

When applying to college, graduate school, or even pursuing a career, adding a study abroad experience to your resume may be a great way to enhance your profile;

Essentially, choosing to study abroad provides you with an experience that you would otherwise not be able to have at home;

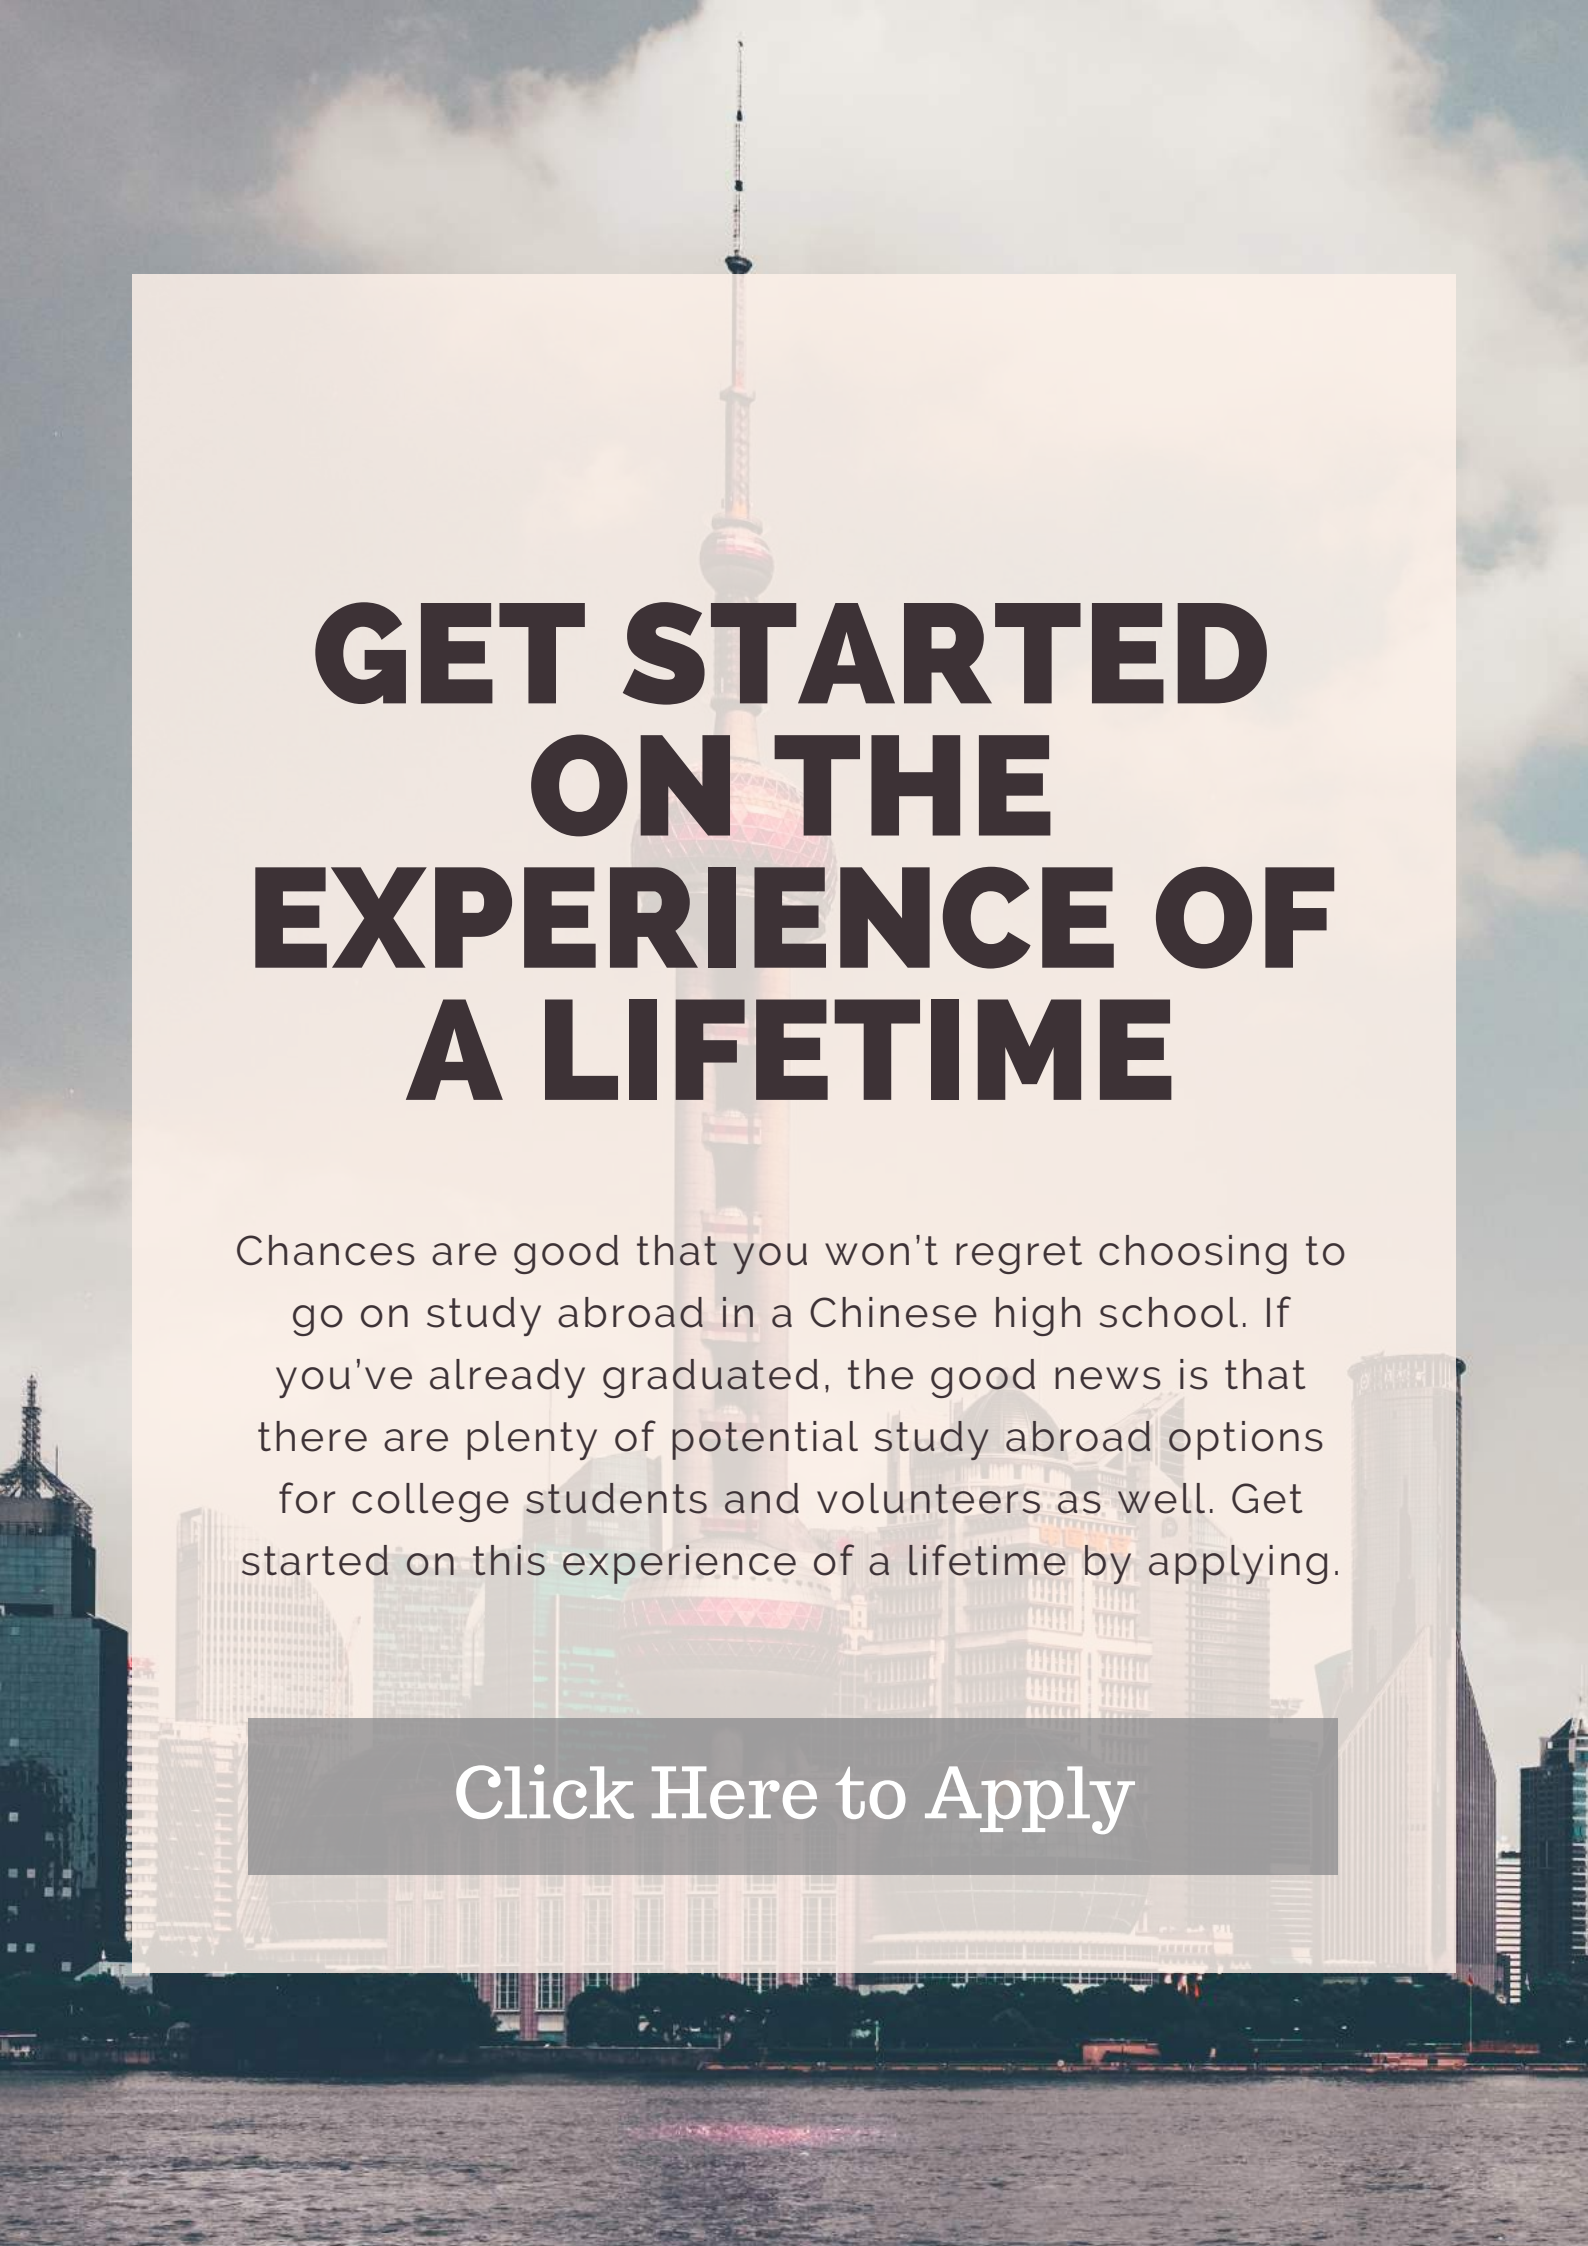

It allows you to grow psychologically and physically while discovering China;

Spend time living with well-organized Chinese Families who prioritize your experience and cultural immersion.

FINDING THE PERFECT PROGRAM

While we have many study abroad high school programs, we understand that not everyone is keen on spending an entire academic year abroad. That's why there are so many different kinds of programs:

- Summer Chinese Language Programs and Camps: If you do want to spend your junior year abroad, then there are high school abroad programs for that. If you would rather spend your academic year at home, then try Our high school summer options. While it is very short ranging from 2 weeks to 3 months, it is packed with so much experience. Spend your summer living with other participants or with a Chinese Family;
- Intensive Language Study Program: If all you want is to learn a foreign language, then Our intensive language study program will be ideal. Once you know how long you want to stay and what you want to get out of the experience, all you need to do is speak with us and we will arrange all logistics. Our staff have over 10 years panning Programs for Students;
- Semester or Year High School Programs: You will be studying with other Chinese Students to understand the concept of Chinese upbringing. You will make friends, study in the same classroom as other Chinese Students. Improve your Chinese skills and also gain some work experiences during holidays;
- Internships: Aside from Language learning, CIP has several job placements for our high school participants. You will be placed in a typical working environment and mentored;
- Volunteering: We allow our participants to also volunteer on various projects like orphanage; teaching migrant kids to speak English or Elderly care or even raise funds for social projects. You will be trained to fit into these projects;
- Flexibility: We allow our participants to combine Internships, Language, Travel and Volunteering.

HSK Program

HSK stands for Hanyu Shuiping Kaoshi (汉语水平考试) or the Chinese proficiency exam. It's an international standardized exam that evaluates the Chinese language abilities of non-native Chinese speakers. There are 6 HSK levels which determine the different stages of a learner's fluency in daily, academic or professional application of the Chinese language.

Which HSK Level to Take?

Normally if you don't have a target, we suggest you aim to pass the HSK 4. HSK 1 and HSK 2 are based on survival Chinese; HSK 3 and HSK 4 are focused on topics related to work, life and study; HSK 5 and HSK 6 are geared towards news, movies, and more work-related topics.

Most Chinese universities and companies require foreign students and staff to get at least HSK 4.

HSK Level	Vocab. Amount	Class Type
		1-on-1	Intensive Group	Part-time Group
HSK 1	150	30 hrs	Complete 1 level per 4 weeks	Complete 1 level per 16 weeks
HSK 2	300	30 hrs
HSK 3	600	90 hrs
HSK 4	1 200	150 hrs
HSK 5	2 400	240 hrs
HSK 6	5 000	240 hrs

HSK LEVELS

HSK 1

After the first few classes, students should be able to put together basic sentences on topics such as food, transportation, and shopping. Students completing this level will have a vocabulary of approximately 150.

HSK 2

Level 2 will focus on sentence structure, retelling basic stories, and some simple grammar. Students who complete this level should be able to express themselves on a range of everyday topics. They should have a vocabulary of approximately 300.

HSK 3

Students will be able to express opinions on simple topics and explain the reasoning behind their opinions. At this stage, they should be able to use and understand approximately 600

HSK 4

Students at this level should feel comfortable commenting on a wide range of subjects related to life, study, and work. They should be able to communicate with native Chinese speakers in daily life or while traveling. They should have a vocabulary of around 1 200.

HSK 5

Students will be able to use some idiomatic expressions in Chinese exchanges. They should be able to read simple passages in Chinese and understand the content of Chinese films and TV shows and to use and recognize a vocabulary of approximately 2 500.

HSK 6

Students at this level will be able to talk about nearly any topic, particularly areas of their specialization. They should have strong conversational skills and be able to understand a large portion of the language. They should have mastered a vocabulary of approximately 5 000.

How to convince your parents an internship / Study abroad is a great idea

This has been an issue for most students and prospective interns. Once you've decided that an internship abroad is the way to get your foot in the door and start your new career off right, the only thing that remains to be done is to convince your parents that it's a good idea as well.

Unfortunately, this is often the hardest step towards making your dream internship a reality. But before you write them off as being unsupportive or distrusting; take a minute to put yourself in their shoes.

There are probably a million things they are worried about, from your safety to poor nutrition and a lack of sleep, and as silly as some of their concerns may seem to you, it is important to be understanding of their feelings and try to come up with solutions to some of the problems they foresee.

Here are a couple of tried-and-proven ways (that's right, I tested them myself) to get your parents on your side and banish any unrealistic concerns or expectations:

Do your Homework Well

Going to face your parents and ask for support to study or intern abroad will not be an east task. They are very matured and will know if you are prepared or not. Most students appear before their parents not know what they are going into and for sure, you are assured that they will not agree to this.

What you should do are:

- Research the destination and shed light on why it is ideal to your career. Coming to China, there loads of reasons that will scale you through
- Understand the cost components from Program Components, to Stipends and then Monthly expenses including flight. Don't leave this for them to do as they have loads of issues to figure out. Make their work easier
- Show them you are committed: Saving ahead of time and your willingness to finance part of the cost puts them on pressure to understand you easily. Let them also know you have considered other sources of funding and explain that to them.

SWALLOW YOUR PRIDE

Whether your parents are helping you out already or not, it's never fun to ask them for more financial support. That said, as painful as it is—it's OK. Remember that you're not alone, and in fact, many, many people are finding themselves in a similar situation right now. An unpaid internship is a good investment in your career—one that will help you gain the experience that you need, get your foot in the door with a company, and make great contacts. But it's still an investment that comes with a price. And that price might be biting the bullet and asking for some help.

Tell your parents well in advance

It can be tempting to put off telling your parents about a possible internship abroad, especially if you know they'll have a strong reaction or be opposed to the idea. However, the longer you wait, the more difficult it will become to tell them, and there's a good chance they'll be rather unhappy about it if you wait until the last possible minute to share the news.

Even before you attend any interviews or start looking for opportunities, you should let your parents know that you are interested in an internship abroad. This gives them time to warm up to the idea and also gives you more time to convince them.

Involve them in the decision making

Don't get me wrong, I'm not saying you should let your parents pick out a country and choose the company you'll intern with, but being open about your options and listening to their advice can do a lot to ease their feeling of powerlessness.

Who knows? They may actually have some great suggestions and insights that will help you make your plans, and if not at least you can say you looked at all your options.

Listen to What They Say

Of course, even after you've made a convincing pitch, your parents may still have questions or reservations about you doing unpaid work. Plan on them including their own two cents—and take what they say seriously, and give thoughtful answers to their questions. Sure, they grew up in a different world—one in which unpaid internships weren't the norm—but that doesn't mean they won't have some valid points for you to consider.

Also think about how you might meet them halfway. You could ask them to chip in half of what you need or see if they could give you a loan that you'll pay back once you score a paid job.

Remember to say “Thank you”

While having your parents micro-manage every last detail of your upcoming trip may be the last thing you want, try to remember that they are doing it because they love you and want the best for you.

If they are getting involved, it's only because they want to be supportive of your choices and that is something that deserves your gratitude and respect. So swallow your pride and show them that you are grateful for their concern and the help they are offering you.

Go for Plan B

If your parents still aren't thrilled about the idea of financially supporting you through your internship or Study Abroad, that doesn't necessarily mean you need to give up the opportunity. Check with your financial aid office for options it has available, as many colleges give out scholarships, grants, or loans to help students who want to pursue internships.

And if not—and if there's no way you can financially make an internship work—keep in mind that it's not the end of the world. It certainly isn't going to ruin your career path. While it might be painful to give up what seems like an amazing opportunity right now, there are other ways to get good experience, and get a paycheck, too.

Stay in touch as much as possible

Before you set out on your new adventure, make sure you find ways to stay in touch with your parents. One of a parent's main worries is often that they will lose touch with their child, and have no idea what is going on in their life.

This may be true to a certain extent, after all, they will only know as much as you choose to tell them, but have some pity on your poor parents and keep them in the know.

Skype is one of the best ways to stay in touch while working abroad, but there may be other ways as well, like special offers on cheap phone calls, texting and of course, Facebook. Iphone applications also offer newer ways of staying in touch, like Viber, Whatsapp and Facetime.

If your parents know where you're staying, and have an easy way of contacting you and vice versa, they will be much more inclined to consent to your internship abroad.
